Presentation: The Business Side of Safety

We will discuss the business side of safety. More and more businesses are taking safety seriously, especially when selecting subcontractors and suppliers. Terms like EMR, TIRR, and DART can have a very large impact on your ability to get contracts, in fact they may be as important as the quality of work you do and the price that you do it for. Even minor accidents or injuries on job sites can lead to in-depth investigation requirements, job stand downs, and put your contracts at risk. In addition to attaining sub-contractor prequalification's, high workers' comp. costs and injury rates prevent you from being as profitable as you could be and put your company at a competitive disadvantage to your better performing competitors, and increase your chance of being involved in an OSHA compliance inspection.
